Disability has always played a significant role in my family. My brother Adam was diagnosed with severe and profound autism in 1990 and our lives were forever changed. Suddenly, a regular childhood was governed by autism. Normal family routines like birthdays, going out to eat, or even doing homework were all managed by a completely separate set of rules. It was manageable, and at times even comical...then puberty hit.

For Adam, who struggled so mightily trying to understand our world, trying to understand what was happening to his body was impossible. He started having vocal and physical meltdowns every day. Suddenly the people who found him manageable, and at times even comical, turned against him. Our extended family no longer invited us to holidays. People stared at us every time we went shopping. Organizations kicked Adam out, establishments whose sole purpose was to help people with autism. I watched as our family became more and more isolated from the outside world. It was us against them...and we were clearly losing.

Falling is the first play I’ve ever come across which tells the story of people with severe and profound autism and their families in an honest way. It’s a story about helplessness in an ever-changing world. It is the story about holding onto your little piece of the world, when everything is falling apart. Most importantly, it is a story of loving someone SO desperately, who is SO desperately impossible to love.

CHICAGO PLAYWORKS FOR FAMILIES AND YOUNG AUDIENCES

Chicago Playworks offers a live theatre experience to students, teachers and parents in the Chicago metropolitan area. It is our mission to provide theatre for children that reflects their experiences in a contemporary, multi-ethnic, urban environment.

Founded as the Goodman Children’s Theatre in 1925, Chicago Playworks is the city’s oldest continuously operating children’s theatre. It has been the first theatre experience for audiences of Chicago’s young people for more than seven decades and was one of the first major theatres for children in the United States. In 1997 and again in 2003, Chicago Playworks was honored by the Illinois Theatre Association with the Children’s Theatre Division Award, for its outstanding long-term contribution to children’s theatre. In 1980, Chicago Playworks was awarded the prestigious Sara Spencer Award by the Children’s Theatre Association of America (now the American Alliance for Theatre and Education).

Chicago Playworks is a vital aspect of the training at The Theatre School at DePaul University. Students gain pre-professional experience in an extended run before a most demanding and appreciative audience. Chicago Playworks presents three unique productions to more than 35,000 young people each season and has entertained more than 1 million schoolchildren and families since 1925.

HISTORY

The Theatre School at DePaul University was founded as the Goodman School of Drama in 1925, made possible by a gift of $250,000 from William and Erna Goodman to the Art Institute of Chicago. The gift was in memory of their son, Kenneth Sawyer Goodman, a playwright. Kenneth dreamed about opening a theatre that combined a repertory company with a dramatic arts school, where classes would be taught by professional artists and actors.

In 1975 the trustees of the Art Institute of Chicago voted to phase out the Goodman School of Drama over a three-year period. Luckily, DePaul University stepped in and embraced the Goodman School of Drama to keep alive a tradition of dramatic programming. DePaul’s first theatre, The College Theatre, opened on the Lincoln Park Campus in 1907.

Throughout the years, The Theatre School at DePaul University has grown in reputation and stature. Our home at Fullerton and Racine opened in September 2013 and was designed by the internationally renowned architect César Pelli and his firm Pelli Clarke Pelli Architects.
