PLAYWRIGHT’S NOTE

Being a sensitive child, my first time seeing The Wizard Of Oz was a bit terrifying. A green and ugly witch, flying monkeys, and bizarre munchkins with odd sounding voices were a little too much for my disposition. But with time, I grew to see the story as a tribute to every person that has ever felt like a failure in life. No brains, no heart, no courage, no home: none of these things were the final word on these so called “misfits.” Working together they overcame the odds and found their dreams. And those dreams were right under their noses all the time, but it took an epic adventure to see them.

Our version of this classic tale involves a new set of “misfits” and a new adventure, but the same timeless truths. It’s a mix of old and new.

Many thanks to the wonderful cast and technical crew who worked through many changes and countless hours of practice to bring this story to life. There really are good things over the rainbow!
