A NOTE FROM THE DIRECTOR

Welcome to the golden age of television. There is a joy and an innocence to Get Smart! which comes with it a built-in smile and an inherent faith that everything will be okay as long as we all remember to laugh. That should be a rule of acting – “All’s well as long as it got a laugh...” (Somebody should needlepoint that on a pillow. I already have a pillow that says, “Diction maximizes volume.” The kids are really sick of hearing me say that… Time for a new pillow…)

I’m grateful to the cast and crew for all they have brought to our production. Watching the actors breaking into laughter as they create the moment is absolutely priceless. Having had two daughters go through DSHA, being here in my first year has helped me truly appreciate why the students really do make all the difference. Their creativity, their willingness to not only point out a problem but also to propose a solution that makes the show even funnier is inspiring. You have a great kids. Thank you for sharing them.

“Get Smart!” is a great moment in “kitchen sink” comedy (you throw in everything, including the kitchen sink…) Enjoy…and do the dishes before you leave…
